ew England is often known for its severity: the bitter cold of its winters, and the harshness of its hot summer days. But what it should be remembered for is its definition.

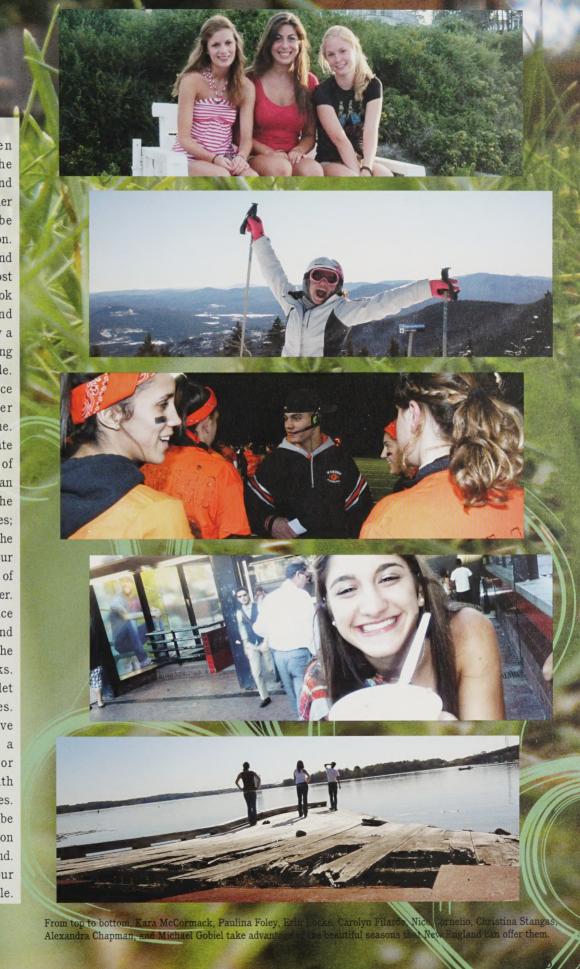

Growing up in New England has left us with some of the most versatile memories. We can look back into our childhood and remember a cozy snow day by a fire, and watching the whipping snow thrash violently outside. Or we can choose to reminisce a relentlessly hot summer day and the smell of chlorine.

We have the most intricate and embellished memories of seasons: the crisp feeling of an autumn breeze, linked to the crunch of a pile of fallen leaves; the smell of fresh flowers, and the feeling we get the first time our skin feels the warm sunlight of a spring day after a long winter.

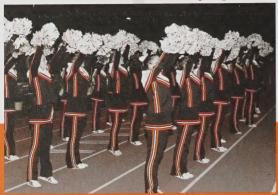

We know from experience that it can snow in April, and summers can be ruined by the endless string of rainy weeks.

But New England has let us enjoy endless possibilities. We have the choice to drive up to the mountains for a weekend and snowboard, or take a trip to the beach with our friends and enjoy the waves.

Our memories wouldn't be complete without the definition given to them by New England. Anything is possible, and our home is just another example.

We are HONORED to be super fans of the athletes with black and orange spilling over them.

The cheerleaders show perfect formation at a Friday night game, while the class of 2012 stays up all night to raise money for cancer research at Relay for Life.

anner pride is not just the text scrawled across fan wear. It is not just a saying NOTED on banners and scoreboards. Tanner pride is the feeling of goose bumps on our arms after winning, or the rush of relief when our star player ties the crucial game.

Tanner pride stretches far beyond the bleachers. The term tanner pride was coined by Coach Sullivan, who said, "Tanner pride is more than football. It is our community." The feeling of pride for the dozens of football players storming out of their locker room is always present. But tanner pride is also with us when our community comes together, and we wear the colors black and orange like a badge. Not only is black and orange constantly displayed on us, it's part of us. It's black and orange. It's in us.

COMMITTMENT

Dedication is not what others expect of you it is what you can give to others.

Jenn McGinnis and Kim Nowell have a great time at the Best Buddies Bowling Party and are dedicated to this wonderful club.

sacrifice

Dreams and dedication are a powerful combination.

Mr. Sullivan sacrifices his afternoon for students who need extra help.

The difference between the impossible and the possible lies in a person's determination.

Amanda Flynn and Edward Armstrong are determined to pass their final exam.

Dedicated Among Us

I will stay after school and get extra help... I will spend my Friday nights volunteering... I will give encouragement to a student who needs it... I will work on a Saturday to get the job done... I will take the time to care... I will run an extra lap and go the extra mile... I will help a friend who needs me...

You may be a student, teacher, friend, administrator, cafe worker, custodian, paraprofessional, or secretary... but if you take the time, you will be remembered as the one who goes above and beyond for the good of a person or project, the one who cares, the one who pushes others to see the good in everyone. You will be the one who is dedicated, determined and committed. "It's what you say and what you do, of how people will remember you."

edication

It is with great honor that we dedicate our yearbook to a person who has been with us every step of the way. She has been by our side from the moment we walked into the front door as freshman to our very last day on graduation. This person began our high school journey as a teacher and ended our high school career as a FRIEND. We are proud to dedicate our yearbook to our wonderful class advisor Mrs. Theresa Christerson.

Mrs. Christerson has taught in the Woburn Public Schools for over 34 years. She has a caring and warm personality that shines through in her smile. She is a hands on class advisor which is evident in her FUN attitude while skating with us during our field trip to the Frog Pond in Boston, rolling her sleeves up while washing cars at our fundraiser, laughing and dancing with us as an elf for the Holiday Dance or by giving us a "mom" speech at our class assemblies.

We all know Mrs. Christerson has a CARING heart as she has taken the time to memorize all of our class photos so she could know each and every one of us by name. She is extremely DEVOTED to our class and has made sure that we have the best memories of our high school years.

It has been written that "It is not in the destination that makes the journey, but in the journey that makes the destination." Our journey through high school with Mrs. Christerson made our destination full of happiness, fun, smiles, memories and most of all friendships. Thank you for being there for us. We sincerely appreciate everything that you do for our class. We hope years from now you will remember us as your FAVORITE class, as you will always be our one and only favorite CLASS ADVISOR.

On your MARK, get SET, GO!

he first chapter of our lives has been handed to us, jotted down on yellow lined paper and loose leaf pages. We were taught to speak but what came next was not our voice. It was our ability to learn, and to listen as we passed through our academics. As children, curiosity often got the best of us, and questions bounced chaotically around our minds. Answers were written down in unfamiliar text books, on brown lunch bags, and brightly colored posters. It seemed as if the world around us was spilling over with information, and we could only grasp so much of it.

Our class scribbled down formulas, histories, and equations. Yet, until now it hasn't made much sense why. We've been taking notes on subjects that don't interest us, which we continuously whine that we'll never need. But now we're moving on and these lessons have never been more valuable. There is no equation for the life we are supposed to go on to lead, but we each make up our own.

As students we learned new knowledge and how to be scholastic. As students in the class of 2012 we were the last to obtain valuable lessons from Principal Norton. The last to hear him say, "These four years are going to fly by," as freshmen on move-up day. We've learned when to study, when not to slack off, and how to challenge ourselves to be the best that we can be. When it came to learning though, our class used the wisdom of Woburn High to help us grow. As teenagers growing up within the high school's halls we've learned about pride, friendship, teamwork, effort, perseverance, and goals. Our four years at Woburn Memorial High School have been engraved on our hearts, as well as our minds.

Our dreams have been slowly growing inside of us for the last four years. Leaving elementary and middle school we had vague ideas of what we wanted to be. The corridors of WMHS have become the lungs of our dreams, expanding each and every time we stepped foot into a classroom. We've been paying close attention to upperclassmen, gaining more and more experience for our own four years. Now it's undeniable that our knowledge is extensive, and our dreams have swelled, and the walls of WMHS can no longer house our hopes and dreams. Now it's our time to move forward, and to do something: to give notes and for others to take note.

As some of us take off in planes and cars to college, and others move on to serve our country or work, we all owe WMHS. Each and every one of us must take with us what we've acquired these past four years and make it worth something. Because we all hold in our hands the knowledge we need to challenge our generation, to make it better. We've spent the past 12 years of our academics having notes handed to us, but now it's our time to give them out.

We need to ensure that future classes take note of us, that they take our experiences at Woburn High and apply them to their own. It is from us, that the classes beneath us should study from now. We've made our mark on this high school as the class of 2012, a class of pride, intelligence, and integrity. But most importantly our class is the impression of totality.

Our class is known for its intricate entanglements. It will be remembered for the series of crisscrossing relationships that lay deep within. Being in the class of 2012 has meant more than merely being represented by the number 12. It means being remembered as the class that made '12 stand for 1 class 2 gether. Yet this is simply the beginning of our definition. If you look closely, analyzing the fine print of the class of 2012, you will realize that our impressions cannot be confined within a single spiral notebook. We are an overwhelming amount of chance, a list of names attached to incredible expectations and promise.

Leaving our high school is the first blank notebook that we get to fill ourselves. This is the first part of our lives we won't have handed to us on a neatly typed handout or scrawled across a white board. All our lives we've been taking notes, now it's time for us to create them. The real world is merely another obstacle that we need to move forward to tackle. As members of the Class of 2012 we deserve to hold our heads up high as we walk towards another challenge. At some point in time Woburn Memorial High School was a challenge, but now it is another accomplishment to add to our list of notes.

Middle School

Joing into middle school we all had two things on our minds: to fit in, and to blend in. Our hearts were set on making best friends and perfect memories. We weren't sure who we were, or what we wanted to be remembered for quite yet.

As our experiences in middle school progressed we were unaware we were learning some of the most important life lessons. Lessons of friendship, morals, education, and popularity were constantly present.

As immature and anxious as we were going into middle school, we came out completely different people.

We entered 6th grade with unfashionable rolling backpacks but walking out of the lobby on the last day of 8th grade we were sporting trendy Abercrombie tote bags and Jordan backpacks.

For some of us leaving middle school was the end of an incredible run, and for others it meant the new freedom of wearing whatever we wanted in high school. But no matter who we were middle school would always house some our favorite memories.

Summer has always been a light at the end of the tunnel, a temporary escape from books, pencils, homework, and teachers. Ever since we were little kids, summer has meant no dress codes, later nights out, and exhaustion from a long day in the sun, rather than the classroom.

As we grew up and our interests started to change, summer began to entitle new things. For some of us this meant extended curfews, or being allowed to drive around with upperclassmen. The summer after freshman year was the first year we left these halls as the class of 2012. We had new friends, which meant we were making a whole new set of "first" memories.

Leaving sophomore year for summer break had a different feel to it, and most of us had found out, one way or another, who we were and who our true friends were. We spent this summer exploring new scenes, which sometimes meant strolling into the Breaker's parking lot or hanging out with the current seniors. Yet, some of us spent this summer enjoying our last few months of having no stress, no responsibilities, and no worries.

The summer following junior year opened a whole new set of doors, where shiny licenses were in our hands, and the six month rule was in our rearview mirrors. We were legal to drive, and many of us were newly employed. Our memories of summer contain freedom, ice cream, and plenty of beach trips.

Leaving senior year will be the last time we walk out of the lobby as the class of 2012, and the first time we break off into the classes of 2016, or employees and servicemen. What won't change are the summer memories we have made as classmates in the class of 2012.

Jot This Down

igh school has been a progression of white lined pages, a symphony of sorts when gearing minds met scratching pencils. For six hours and twenty one minutes we spent each day inside the halls of Woburn High. We fell into a rhythm with the boundaries of the school, where each day moves in sync with the next. Lost at first, we took note of each twist and turn of the hallways. We mapped out our path for each class, jotting down what upperclassmen did differently than ourselves. Soon each hallway and classroom became home to us, and we could subconsciously navigate throughout our school. The notes we had taken, scattered throughout our folders, had risen off the pages and become intuitive. We had learned so much, so quickly, simply about the building: however, it didn't stop there.

The information that we obtained slowly started to become too riveting, too much for the borders of our formerly suitable high school. Maybe not the formulas and equations, but the lessons themselves began allowing students to take away more than they could have ever imagined. For the last four years we've sat in our classrooms and listened, and until now that has always seemed like enough. Yet we've been blind to the fact that learning has gone far beyond textbooks and projects. The lessons we've obtained come from the people who spent the past four years next to us.

Freshman year we walked timidly through the lobby of our new home, with strangers to the right of us and lifelong friends to left of us. The entire experience seemed a little strange, but eventually the two worlds collided and we were left with the foundation of our class. There were no longer students of the class of 2008 but students of the class of 2012, a unit, shifting through high school together. It was our freshmen year that tanner pride felt ever present while standing in the pouring rain at a football game. The feeling of pride was punched into our memory, with visions of black and orange waves crashing over the bleachers.

As the hands on the clock continued spinning, stopping for no memory or moment, we continued moving right along as well. Each year greeted us on the tiled 'W' in the lobby before we could even process the previous year's departure. Lessons of friendship, morals, ethics, and love knocked into us as we rounded each corridor, making sure to sneak up on us when they were least expected. The classmates we were brushing up against in the hallway, making quick eye contact with on the stairs, or standing beside each day for four years are the reasons why our high school experiences are the way they are today.

These past few years have helped us learn about ourselves and others. Whether a certain class triggered our desire to pursue a career or one teacher's question made us reevaluate ourselves, we've all learned so much. We've had teachers who have questioned our antics, or made us step outside of our comfort zones. We're told time and time again to "jot this down," to just add one more piece of information to our notes. Yet with each glide of our pen we've been adding on to our hopes and dreams.

Not only have our notebooks become full of promising information, but our minds and hearts as well. We have the power to take with us what we've come to understand because of Woburn High, and make a change. Because the margins of our notebooks can no longer hold in our knowledge, but the margins of the real world are no where near as small.

and Robert Campbell.

Amanda Rollins and Sarah Rollins both have different feelings about their first day of high school.

Treshman year was the kick start to our real academic careers. It was another huge push in the direction of the real world, and we spent a good amount of time planning for the future. Although thoughts of college weren't our main priority, we were constantly looking for ways to make our high school experience, and mainly senior year, a little bit easier. As our class advisor, Mrs. Christerson started planning all of our class's major events the moment we set foot in the lobby. Every calendar fundrasier, activities committee meeting, car wash, and election was put on in an incredible effort to save us money, and help make our senior year a little less stressful. Whether it was by doubling up in math classes, taking an extra period of classes instead of that desirable study, or standing soaking wet at a car wash full of classmates, every one of our actions was completed for the future. Freshman year was not always the easiest, but the effort the class of 2012 put in to it would become incredibly evident come senior year.

Shut Down Sophomore Stress

ophomore year was important to our academic careers. We weren't juniors yet, and SATs were still a daunting light in the future. The school year introduced the PSATs, and the real world seemed that much closer. We worked hard to make our transcript sparkling. The best thing about sophomore year was we filled in our last MCAS bubbles we didn't have to stress over the mandatory testing ever again.

ophomore year came with a lot of the perks of being upperclassmen, but unfortunately we weren't quite there yet. We knew which one of the doors was locked in the morning, how to get to lunch fast enough to get a good seat, and which hallways to avoid when we were running late for class. But we still had a back row seat at the Friday night football games, and had to watch from afar as the seniors had their own cafeteria. We were still gaining respect from our classmates and figuring out just who we wanted to be. Our upperclassman experience was right around the corner, and many of us couldn't wait for the new found respect. But as far as sophomore year went, we were comfortable in our own skin and ready to let WMHS see our true selves.

Her hearing about the stress junior year entails, many of us came through those familiar glass double doors excited to start a new year, but shaking with nerves and anticipation. We were warned by every teacher and every senior before us to beware of the "most stressful year of high school". The newly acquired title of upperclassmen came with burdensome responsibilities. We had our shiny new licenses pressed into our wallets we felt invincible. Our challenging courses and SAT scores quickly humbled us. Junior year was filled with college visits, driving lessons, exams, guidance appointments, jobs, and finding that perfect dress for our first prom (or attempting to find the right colored corsage so your date doesn't throw a tantrum). Never-the-less, we strove through the tribulations and conquered the year as one class together.

s the junior class of 2012 steps onto the turf, adjusts their eyes to the bright stadium lights, and smears black paint under their eyes, they're more united than ever before. Stepping into a huddle, their coaches run a couple plays by them one final time before they step onto the field. The girls line up on the fifty yard line, eager to prove to the senior class that they're class has just a little bit more school pride. But they're even more excited to prove to the current boys that girls can play sports just as well as them, and in this case, a little better. The game provides a night of bonding; a few hours where the girls of the class of 2012 can be one group of friends. The numbers on the scoreboard don't mean much by the final whistle, the only significant record is that the class of 2012 was there: they made their mark, and other classes will take note of their plays.

hroughout our four years in high school, waking up in the morning never got any easier. A constant stream of homework, essays, and projects kept us up all night, craving sleep more than anything. Yet our alarms always sounded too soon, and waking up before sunrise was never a preferred choice. The students' parking lot was alive, and often packed before the ungodly hour of 7 in the morning. For some students, waking up extra early for a spot in front of the bleachers was well worth the extra stress. For others, racing the sunrise in the morning was a requirement, not a decision. AP science classes required that students come in once a week sometime before 7 o'clock to participate in labs or extra class time. These students not only spent countless hours at night cramming for tests, but they also found themselves on the road to WMHS before a majority of the rest of their classmates were even awake. Whether it was for prime parking or more time in the classroom, students of WMHS woke up and dragged our half-awake bodies to Montvale Avenue. Our immense motivation got us out of bed, into the classroom, and onto the stage graduation day.

Cole Connolly, John Secatore, William Cuozzo, Nico Cornelio. and Christopher Donohue attempt to make their English class a little more lively by acting out MacBeth. On AP science early days students are often in the lab before the sun is even shining. For many students dedication to their classes can get them out of bed at some insanely early hours in the morning.

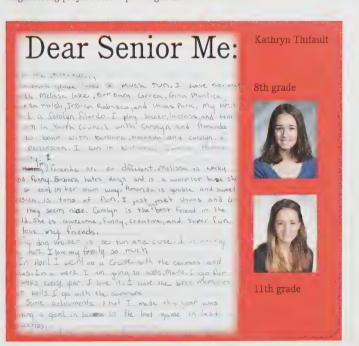

Alexandra Chapman uses the hallways' convenient benches to take a quick nap before homeroom. Michael Cain and Tracy Nascimento work together to practice and perfect their piano playing. Hao Mach and Erin O'Neil get to school early to help eliminate some of their stress. Maura O'Brien is all smiles early in the morning while preparing for her test. To the left, Sean Gibbons and Christopher Gibbons put the finishing touches on their engineering project before passing it in to Mrs. Getherall.

he hallways of Woburn High are well known for their unique personality. Entering WMHS as freshmen we had to learn the ins-and-outs of the hallways on our own, without the help of freshly printed plaques. Eventually these brightly tiled halls were home to us, and we knew which hallways to avoid and which ones to take to class. Whether we were standing behind a group of freshmen parked in the middle of the halls, encountering one of the many infamously awkward hallway dances, or catching up with our friends between classes - the halls were home to many of our favorite memories.

hroughout our high school careers we've been witness to many incredible feats. We watched our hockey and basketball teams play in the same arena as the Celtics and Bruins. We stood in a pool of black and orange shirts with "Welcome to the WU" scrawled across them, tanner pride was ever present. Yet there was something most of us Tanners were unaware of as we stood beneath the dozens of banners at the Garden. We were unaware that we are the future champions, award winners, nominees, and trophy holders. We hold in our hands the ability and influence to be a retired number in a grand arena, or an important name carved into a plaque.

What does noteworthy exactly mean when it comes to the hundreds of teenagers in the class of 2012? It means commendable, a valid representation of the incredible class that we are. Noteworthy embodies the idea that our experiences at Woburn High, whether they be struggles or accomplishments, will not be tossed into the air with our graduation caps. We're a part of the high school, scratched onto its walls, locked inside its trophy cases, and etched inside each "W." And although time will fade our impact, it will never erase the success we had at Woburn High.

As teenagers growing up in our generation, talent seemed to revolve around artistic ability, creativity, and uniqueness. It persuaded Woburn High School students to follow their own passion. For these reasons this book holds the future's writers, singers, dancers, musicians, and artists. As teenagers growing up within the walls of Woburn High, we put our own twist on talent. TAKE NOTE that our class had the most incredible super fans, leaders, and athletes. Do not forget our classmates who painted themselves black and orange, and became the definition of tanner pride.

Our class deserves the documentation that it has always striven for. We deserve to be the names in the scrolling credits at the end of a movie, or the face of a ground breaking discovery. Many of us are worthy of having our name on the back of a jersey, or following the title of doctor or professor. Although our names will always identify us, we have the ability to define it. We have the knowledge, drive, and power to cement our names into history, to make them worth something.

rt provided a canvas for passion for many of our classmates. Student work fills the hallways with creativity and uniqueness, and to allow students to do with the blank walls as they pleased. Years from now a class much like our own will walk the familiar hallways of WMHS and our very own artwork will be a part of their high school experience. # The fect veryday life at Woburn High could become a little stressful, but some students found their escape through music. Students spent hours after school gliding across the hardwood floors of a dance studio in an effort to perfect their big number, while other classmates sat quietly in their rooms finding the perfect note to end their newest song with. Music was a temporary escape throughout our four years together: a constant that we knew would never falter. For some of us, music was an escape through lyrics, where songs could provide comfort. For others, music was a challenge, something we strove towards with every strum of our guitar or pitch of our voice. What we all had in common was that music helped us get through the hectic class schedules, the demanding assignments, and the chaos of WMHS.

TRADITION

For over 50 years the Annual Woburn Host Lions Club Halloween Parade has served as a notable tradition for Woburn. Every year Woburnites of all ages rush down to the center to grab front row seats, which means prime candy-grabbing spots.

With the whole town lined up on the sidewalks in anticipation, our band marches proudly through the streets, bringing the huge parade of thirty floats to life. The notes of the WMHS band fills the streets with "Black and Orange" every year, making their mark on this lasting tradition.

These WMHS students get ready for their performance of Thoroughly Modern Millie in the chorus room. Kaitlynn Mcsweeney performs the xylophone at the Tanners' half time show. Jonathon Meyers marches through the center at the Halloween parade. Emilia Oliveira leads the trumpet line at one of the WMHS band's famous Winterfests. The highschool band students team up with the middle school band for a day of music. The drama cast Modern Millie pose for a picture after their final performance. The drum line plays in perfect unison at the Halloween parade.

Duly Noted:

Uur class will always be remembered for its web of relations. Throughout the past four years we've made lifelong relationships with some truly amazing people, but let's not forget the siblings who made it through WMHS together. The class of 2012 had nine sets of twins that made it through the halls of WMHS with a little help from each other.

Fun Facts

- 43 out of 100 births results in twins.
- 22% of twins are lefthanded.
- Identical twins have different fingerprints.
- Twins can be born on different days.
- Guiness record for number of twins in one high school class is 10 in Texas.
- All twins are siblings.

MATTERS

Is a class compiled of an almost record breaking number of twins, we knew a lot about the importance of family. Relationships meant a significant amount to us in high school, between first loves and best friends, and we had come to cherish them over the past four years. Yet, within our class, many of our peers were related to the very faculty members that walked our halls. And beyond that, many of the faculty members were related to one another. Although it could be tough at times, sharing the first four years of freedom and adulthood with your mom, cousin, or father; the students at Woburn High did so with optimism. We've held our heads high, and let family come first. The class of 2012 knew that family matters, and as one of the closest classes formed in WMHS, it surely showed.

No Turning Back

be. Our futures hold an uncertainty that we have not yet been faced with. Looking back at the past is simple, the questions are answered and there is little mystery left to wrap our minds around. Moving forward unfolds a new set of questions, and a desire to shine light on what will be. There is no turning back after we step across that stage at graduation. Well, maybe only when nostalgia hits and this book can be a comfort; a reminder of who you were when you were trying to figure it all out.

The details of our class are set in stone, scribbled down in playbooks, typed in bold fonts on playbills, and stored away in file cabinets. We cannot white out the undesirable parts of high school, or cross out a section because we are consumed with regret. High school is not comparable to a research paper, where we can edit time and time again, until the final product is flawless. This is not just a rough draft, it is the final copy. We only get one chance to walk the halls of our high school, and it was not supposed to be perfect. What we shouldn't do is regret, because our lives in high school have shaped us. Our experiences are the reason we are about to set off into the unknown. It is the very reason we're nervous to say goodbye to lifelong friends, and excited to make a name for ourselves.

These four years that everyone told us would fly by seemed to have passed by as quickly as promised. We lost control, and the ability to pause our experience seemed impossible. And for this reason the pages flew by. Some of us may wish to put the book down and procrastinate, to do anything but finish the last few pages of our senior year. Others may be reading hastily, skimming pages just to see what the next chapter has to hold. Our time at Woburn High hasn't slowed down for any moment, and the pages are continuously flipping. It is almost as if our entire high school voyage runs parallel to the idea of a paperback book that has fallen victim to the wind. The pages stopped for no one moment, and now there is nothing left to do except put the book down.

We deserve to become the people we want to be. Just because the future is not defined yet does not mean we don't hold in our hands the ability to mold it. Take the world you've been given and shape it into greatness. Don't give up until it is a world in which you find yourself happy. We know not what we may be, and that is what makes the future so nerve-wracking and exciting. Anything is possible if we can't turn back, the world is waiting: what mark are we going to leave on it?

Shauna Fumicello, Christina Stangas, Erin Marshall, Krista Scire, Emily Dunnigan, Brianna Gangi, Kate Amendola, Stephanie Rufo, Tess Amendola, and Alexis Stangas get ready for a night in Boston for an 18th birthday dinner. Kayla Doherty brings her amazing personality to the class of 2012. Chris Gibbons and James Wollinger enjoy their first and only year in the senior cafe. Laura Standley and Michelle Gibbons cram some last minute homework in during lunch. Marissa Plunkett enjoys her favorite class with Mrs. Thifault.

Kara McCormack and Christopher Donahue spend time at a friends house, enjoying the weekends together during their last year at WMHS. Rene Duarte files to class for his last first day of school assembly. Kylie Burke and Jessica Kuhn are excited to be back at the books and catching up with old friends. Michael Gobiel, Carolyn Filardo, Kathryn Thifault, and Alexandra Chapman get away for the weekend. Mrs. Connell and Brian Giantasio catch up outside of the classroom. Ryan Murphy is ready to fall into the routine of his senior year schedule. Brandon Kula stresses over reading Crime and Punishment in AP English. Nancy Tran and Kunal Muhkerjee are glad to be back for senior year, and ready to make it the best school year yet.

Bottom right: John Tebin, William Coorso, Hunter Romano, Stephanie Tarpy, and Rahma Mintengu vote as well.

0 C ach year we filed into the lobby on an exciting September day and got back into the rhythm of our high school experience. We were back to books and homework and slowly easing ourselves off of tanning and beach trips. Not everything about being back in school was work, there were football games and pep rallys to look forward to, and the best way to begin a new year of tanner pride was the homecoming dance. Homecoming was held to reunite the classes, to welcome the freshman and envy the seniors. We officially took the torch as Woburn High's senior class: the oldest, the wisest, and definitely the most optimistic about the upcoming school year. Homecoming was a little different our senior, because for us it was a goodbye to beginnings. This was the last time we started a clean slate in high school, the last time we would have a complete year to walk the halls. We welcomed the experience of one last year and officially took on the role of the 2012 seniors. We were beginning our senior activities, naming homecoming king and queen and letting the ball drop on all the incredible memories we were about to make.

HOMEGOMING

Spirit : WEIK

This is a class of many firsts, the class of 2012 was also the first to introduce to WMHS a "spirit week." This was a three day week following the Homecoming Dance. Day One was titled "Dress Like a Twin Day," where students were encouraged to dress up in identical outfits. To the right, Shauna Fumicello and Krista Scire dressed up like the famous duo Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum. Day Two was put aside for a hallway decorating • contest, where each class was given a perimeter, and battled to have the hallway that embodied the most tanner pride. The senior class won of course, and below is activities members Stephanie Rufo and Sarah Ryan creating posters. Day Three was the pep rally: a revamped, retannered, and redone pep rally. This was the first year in a while that tanner pride was at • full force. Below Alexander Thomas leads fellow "Most Likely to Bleed Black and Orange" winners, Shannon McGuire and • Taylor Platon into the gym, displaying their true tanner pride.

Romano leads the crowd in a cheer, Robert Campbell, Mr. MC, gets the crowd

Kathryn Thifault, Sean Gibbons, Alexandra Chapman, and Christopher Gibbons embrace the holiday cheer that fills the lobby. Stephanie Tarpy and Tumi pose as the snow falls. Hao Mach and William Lee show off their matching outfits. Kathryn Doyle, Aprille Hibbard, Morgan Marshall, and Krista Scire dance the night away. Kate Amendola and Erin Marshall jump through Woburn High's very first motion booth. Gregory Forbes and Kasey Gonsalves help form the cha-cha line around the lobby. Madison Doherty, Kathryn Knight, Kimberly Dulong, Melissa Doherty, Michelle O'Connell, John DiRienzo, and Michael Cain celebrate with holiday cheer.

Activities COMMITTEE

he activities committee never stopped trying to help our class make senior year affordable. From the moment we entered Woburn High our freshman year, we were working hard to lower all of our expenses. In January, the committee took a field trip into Boston to go ice skating on Frog Pond at the Boston Common. Below, Mikaela Holt, Annalise Bourgeois, and Taylor Platon bundle up to go skating. In February, we held a Valentine's Day Pancake Breakfast fundraiser, where over 300 people attended to support the class of 2012. March Madness was a common fundraiser we turned to when we needed to make money for our class' expenses, and it always offered amazing gifts for participants. Below, Mr. Finigan enjoys breakfast at the Moose Club to help our class raise money.

Now is the time for us to shine.

The time when our dreams are within reach and possiblities vast.

Now is the time for us to become the people we have always dreamed of being.
This is our world;
you're here
The world is waiting.

D.E.AR FUTURE ME

I hope to make the most of what I learned as a student at Woburn High. I hope to be a teacher at WMHS so I can help kids find their way the way I did. I hope to make it to Broadway with my acting, just to know what it is like to perform. I hope to be the editor-andchief of a really popular magazine in the big city. I hope to win the lottery and have all my life to travel the world and see everything. I hope to be the manager of a huge corporation and make a lot of money for my family. I hope to write something that matters to someone, a book or quote that makes them feel something.

I hope to be a singer, and to have at least a couple platinum records on my walls at home.

I hope to remember everything about high school but have a fresh start when it's all through. I hope to direct a movie in the future that all of you see, and to have my name scrolling in the credits.

I hope to be an artist, to draw something that leaves people breathless and amazed.

I hope to remain an athlete, and to be the biggest name mentioned on ESPN every night. I hope to be an amazing parent and to give my kids everything that they could imagine. I hope to look back at this book in a couple of years and remember all the amazing times we had at WMHS.

IWONDERWHAT

I hope to help others by paying it forward.

I hope to have a really big family, and to adopt as many kids as I can afford to help. I hope to be the kind of person who others never forget. I hope to be the first woman president; all the world needs is a smart girl.

I hope I never forget the dreams I have at this moment, and let nothing push me down. I hope to stay in touch with all of my best friends from WMHS, and never forget them. I hope to be happy with whatever choices I make after I leave these halls.

BE

I hope to be the pest at what I do, to lead by example and work for everything I achieve.

I hope to be living in a big house, with a lot of money to spend on whatever I want.

I hope to be in the Olympics someday, to make everyone in Woburn incredibly proud. I hope to make it in the fashion industry, to get a really great job in the city. I hope to leave Woburn and to make it on my own somewhere far away. I hope to be a doctor, so I can save lives and make a lot of money while I'm at it.

I hope to become an engineer and change the world by working with others.

A Yerd's Guide:

To Making a Noteworthy Yearbook

1. Spring Training!
The yearbook advisors chose our staff in April

The yearbook advisors chose our staff in April of our junior year. Susan Happel, our rep from Herff Jones Publishing Company, spent two days training us on the InDesign software. We later attended yearbook camp at the end of the school year.

2.Cover Design!

We spent many hours brainsforming ideas on the theme of the book and discussed what we wanted to be remembered for as a class. We took a field trip to Concord Carlisle High School to meet our cover design artist from Herff Jones and spent the day designing our

3. Page Design!

We worked as a team and everyone brought their own personal style to the pages. Hao was our photoshop man, Shauna let all of the wonderful words flow onto the pages, and Taylor became the detail queen. Emily was the creative genius behind the titles and sport pages, Kathyn made sure all the designs were solid, while Nancy worked her magic on the layouts, and Ali made sure our pages were fun.

4. Taking Pictures!

As soon as we walked in the door on move up day freshman year Mrs. Thifault, Mrs. Getherall and Burlington Studios made sure we had thousand of photos that told the story of our lives in high school. Many students also sent in photos online at eshare.

5. Creating Layouts!

Accomplishing this feat was amazing. Every single page of the book was decided on during our spring training. All layouts were created and catogorized. Every single page of the yearbook was custom designed during our 7th period, after school, late at night, or early Saturday mornings.

6. Writing!

We had to make sure that all of the dividers had a wonderful story that went with our theme, which became a huge task. Shauna spent many hours polishing the words and Taylor made sure every "t" was crossed and "i' was dotted.

7. Off to the plant!

Pages were sent via computer to the plant in Gettysburg, PA. There they went through a color correction process for each photo, checked for accuracy and layout consistency. They were then sent off to the printing press and then folded and collated. Pages are then stitched and binded into the cover and then packed and shipped to our school for our yearhook ceremony.

We're always going to have people telling us we can't pick our family. Yet, Mrs. Thifault and Mrs. Getherall are fortunate enough to get to choose theirs every April. Through a series of intense interviews and resume overlooks our junior year, our yearbook advisors chose the seven students that they thought would work together best. Our staff did just that. Junior year we were faced with the challenge of choosing this book's theme: take note. After that, the pieces all seemed to fall into place. We brainstormed our dream book, one that would make each one of you feel proud to graduate in the class of 2012. Each staff member was truly talented at their own thing. Some of us were essential to unique theme based ideas, while others were always there to make everyone laugh when stress was causing conflict. There were bound to be issues when creating this yearbook which sometimes required six hours of consecutive work in the same small room, but we did alright. And although in-house field trips spent crammed up in the yearbook room were stressful and exhausting, we walked out of each one of them with another handful of amazing memories. The reason this staff worked together so well, was because we all had a common goal: to make this the best book to leave the halls of Woburn High. We've taken care of this book for the past year and a half, now it's your turn.

OF FINE-TUNED MACHINES THAT TURNS YOUR TRASH INTO TREASURE.

There's a lot that goes into Zero-Sort. But it all starts with one bin.

Meet Phil Harden, maestro of the mean, green, recycling machines at Zero-Sort. From his perch at the control center, he keeps things running smoothly so that all of your mixed recyclables end up in the world, not in the landfill.

To see how Zero-Sort makes the most of your recycling efforts, call (888) 760-2076 or visit zerosort.com today.

TORNADO DAMAGE

VIOLENT APRIL TORNADO OUTUREAN

While Tuscaloosa, AL received the lion's share of damage on April 27, 2011 when tornados there caused devastation and killed nearly 300 people, the storm series included 359 confirmed tornados in 21 states over the course of three days. Four of the twisters were rated F-5, the rating for most destructive storms.

weather and other catastrophes caused the agency to launch 137 relief operations in 46 states in 2011.

May's F-5 tornado destroyed one-third of the Missouri town, killing more than 150.

In late August, severe winds and intense rainfall brought flooding and damage to the northeast. More than 5 million homes and businesses were without power for as long as a week.

While little damage and only minor injuries were reported following a 5.9 earthquake in August, a crack was found in the famed Washington Monument and the Virginia quake was felt from Toronto to Charlotte. WILDFIRES A long-standing drought and strong winds contributed to the worst wildfire season in the history of Texas.

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING PITTED PLAYERS AGAINST OWNERS in both the NBA and NFL Sports fans feared the worst but both leagues were able to agree in time to save most of their regular seasons. In the NBA, the focus was primarily on cutting player salaries to help struggling learns. Both sides remained far apart on just about every major issue. They settled in late November, agreeing to a 66-game schedule, with the first games set for Christmas Day, cutting two weeks off the regular season. The NFL lockout lasted from March 11 to July 25. Once an agreement was reached, the players won additional benefits; the continuation of a 16-game regular season schedule, improvements in player safety and increased injury protection.
